Work of Special Session Weighed on Different Scales

MESSRS. CLARK AND MANN

Former Believes Democrats Proved Capacity for Constructive Statesmanship. Latter Says That They Are Blunderers.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Speaker Clark in a review of the work of the first session of the sixty-second congress declared that the democratic party in congress had set a good example to democrats everywhere and that the party had redeemed every pledge made in the campaign of 1910.

"At this session the democrats made a record that is a surprise to their friends and has dumfounded their enemies," he said. "It has put heart and hope into democrats everywhere. The extra session was extraordinary not only in the sense of being a special session, called by the president but also in the amount and quality of the work done in the house by the combined democrats and insurgent republicans and the combined democrats and republican insurgents in the senate and especially by the unanimity of action developed by the house democrats."

"It was predicted freely, vociferously, enthusiastically and continuously by the standstill press and orators that we would go to pieces. That account, and by reason of that hope, they rejoiced that the extra session of congress was called so that we might go to pieces at the earliest possible date. But we have sorely disappointed their expectations. They even set the date when we would go to pieces, which was the date of the democratic caucus, January 19. But unfortunately in that caucus everything was done unanimously. They said we would surely go to pieces as soon as we reached the tariff, but again we were disappointed. We are more thoroughly united in the house at the end of the session, if possible, than at the beginning."

"Sneered at for years as a party of mere negation, utterly lacking in ability for constructive statesmanship, we have passed more constructive legislation than any house in the same length of time in twenty years. We have redeemed every promise we made to carry the elections in 1910. We have economized, have passed the reciprocity, the better tariff, the free list, and the cotton tariff, the senate amendment including the iron, steel, chemical schedules; we have submitted for ratification, a constitutional amendment for the popular election of senators, the campaign publicity expenses bill, and the New Mexico and Arizona statehood bill."

"To show how completely the standstill republicans are demoralized it is only necessary to quote the newspaper statements of great rejoicing at the White House because we failed by a scratch to get a two-thirds majority to override the president's veto although we have only sixty-three majority in the house. The president, who rode into power with a huge majority, is glad to escape the humiliation of having his veto overridden in a house containing a majority of only sixty-three."

"Notwithstanding the fact that four cabinet members were on the floor of the house lobbying in favor of the veto with all the power and patronage of the administration, twenty-two insurgent republicans had the courage and manhood to override the president's veto. We honestly and persistently endeavored to relieve the people of some of the burdens of taxation, but to use a sporting phrase, 'the president blocked the game.' On these issues we appeal to the country, feeling absolutely certain that as we stood for the best interest of the people, the people will stand by us."

The cabinet officers Clark referred to were Messrs. Hitchcock, Wickersham, Stimson and Nagle.

TAFT STRENGTHENED.
Leader Mann Finds That Only Satisfactory Result of Session.

Washington, Aug. 22.—Republican Leader Mann in a statement as to the minority view of the work of the extra session, by the democratic house, declared that the result was to strengthen the president and weaken the democracy and that the democrats, "in trying to put the president in a hole," in the tariff legislation had been "hoist with their own petard."

"The special session," said Mr. Mann, "was called by the president in fulfillment of an agreement with Canada as to the reciprocity bill. That bill has become a law. The democrats would have been wise if they had confined the special session to the consideration of the reciprocity bill. Instead, they set out to show how they could bungle legislation. They prevented the passage of the constitutional amendment for the direct election of senators by insisting on coupling with it another amendment to deprive the general government of one of its necessary powers. They nearly defeated statehood by insisting that congress give practical approval to the recall of judges, and prepared tariff bills without a knowledge of their form or substance. They brought in tariff bills grotesque in form with the plain avowal that they neither knew nor cared what their effect might be on the industries of the country, planted themselves squarely on a platform against protection and in favor of a tariff revenue only, without knowing what the effect on the revenue might be. The special session developed the broadness of Mr. Taft's statesmanship, and also the incompetency of the democrats in legislation."

IT WAS A CHEAP SESSION.
Washington, Aug. 22.—Chairman Fitzgerald of the appropriations committee, reviewing the work of the extra session, stated that the appropriations of the congress in the extra session aggregated $361,652. He declared that no session of congress had ever run so long or appropriated so little.

NO HIT, NO RUN.

Fall River, Aug. 22.—For the second time this season, Blum, of the Fall River team, of the New England league, today pitched a no hit, no run game. Only one man got as far as second.

MORE THAN A MATCH FOR BILLY PAPKE

ILLINOIS THUNDERBOLT WAS A DISAPPOINTMENT.

Outfought by Sailor Burke in Almost Every Round.

New York, Aug. 22.—Sailor Burke, outfought Billy Papke, who claims the middleweight championship, in a ten round bout here tonight. Papke's showing was a disappointment to the big crowd and he was hissed and booed after the first two rounds. Burke carried the fight in nearly every round and while he showed no science he belabored the Illinois man with a will, that earned him the applause in every round. He was scarcely marked at the close of the fight.

Papke seemed unwilling, or unable to make a showing. Each weighed about 155 pounds. Among those present was the Marquis of Queensberry, under whose rules the fighting game was regenerated. Two newly appointed state boxing commissioners were also at the ringside and closely watched the movements of the men.

Round one—Burke rushed, and sent a left to the body without a return. Papke reached the face and received a hard left in the stomach. They were swapping hard short punches in the center when the bell rang.

Round two—They rushed to a clinch and fought at close quarters. Burke was the better at in-fighting, sending hard lefts to the body. Papke worked for short arm hooks to the body and took several hard jolts in the face in return. Burke's round.

Round three—Papke rushed, but ran into a right uppercut. Burke rushed and Papke slipped to his knees in his own corner. Burke forced pace, landing lefts to the face. Then he rushed Papke across the ring landing several hard body blows. Burke's round.

Round four—Burke sent Papke to the ropes with left and right swings to the head. They slugged all over the ring, mixing fiercely. Both were cautioned holding. Papke sent in a half dozen lefts and rights to the head, body, and right uppercut on the jaw. Burke was getting wild. Papke's round.

Round five—Burke sent Papke to the ropes with left and right swings to the head. They slugged all over the ring, mixing fiercely. Both were cautioned holding. Papke sent in a half dozen lefts and rights to the head, body, and right uppercut on the jaw. Burke was getting wild. Papke's round.

Round six—The sailor landed four rights in quick succession to the head. Papke then put Burke on the ropes with two hard left swings to the jaw. They tugged and pushed each other all over the ring. Burke's round.

Round seven—They rushed together, Burke shaking Papke with a left to the jaw, Papke sent a straight left to the face, but Burke was right back with two hard lefts to the face. Papke's left eye was closed at the ring of the bell. Burke's round.

Round eight—Papke missed a right swing to the head. There was in-fighting at close quarters. Burke cut loose with lefts and rights to the face and body, Papke covering. They were clinched in Papke's corner at the bell. Burke's round.

Round nine—Papke cut loose with right and left hooks to the jaw, and two left uppercuts. Burke landed two stiff lefts to the face. Clinch after clinch came without a blow being struck. They were clinched at the bell. Even.

Round ten—Burke rushed with a left to the body. Burke put quick in succession four lefts to the head, Papke answering with short arm blows to the stomach. Burke slammed a right twice, hard to the head and they were punching each other hard in a clinch at the bell, neither hearing it. Burke's round.

HAPPY FAMILY IS SCATTERED

Adjournment of Extraordinary Session

WASHINGTON IS DESERTED

The Last Moments Were Peaceful, Undisturbed by a Ripple After Tumultuous Episodes of Last Few Months.

Washington, August 22.—The first session of the sixty-second congress ended today and the departure of the members began immediately. President Taft joined the departing lawmakers and tonight official Washington is deserted. The adjournment was featureless, despite the strenuous activity that characterized the session.

The president vetoed the cotton revision bill, just as he had vetoed its predecessors, the wool revision and free list bills. The veto went only to the house, according to custom, and there its receipt was met with democratic laughter and republican applause.

Democratic Leader Underwood, in a short speech, formally thanked the republicans who had voted for the various tariff revision bills and democrats ran across the aisles to shake hands with the republican insurgents amid wild cheering and pounding of desks on the democratic side.

As soon as he could be heard, Mr. Underwood announced that the democrats did not have the necessary number of democrats present to pass the bill over the veto by the two-thirds majority, and he merely moved the printing of the veto and its reference to the ways and means committee. The house agreed. The matter now rests with the committee until the whole subject of tariff revision is renewed in the next regular session in December.

Everybody was in a happy mood in both houses, but the usual vaudeville features that mark the last few minutes of each closing congress, were missing today. The nearest approach to it was the singing of "Auld Lang Syne" by a group of the younger members.

The galleries on both sides of the capitol were crowded. President Taft spent a half hour at the capitol, making a social as well as a business visit. In a room in the rear of the building, he was called upon and cheered by members of all political shades.

Vice President Sherman was one of the first to shake the president's hand. The president later busied himself signing all the eleventh hour measures passed, and vetoing none.

The senate spent a restless day. It convened at noon and 35 minutes later took a recess until 2 P. M. Then came an executive session to consider minor nominations and another recess to 2:45 P. M. During the recesses the senators gathered in the aisles and exchanged greetings. Progressives, regulars and democrats, mingled their hearty good wishes.

In the house, Leader Underwood shared with Speaker Clark the congratulations of the party's achievements in the first democratic house in years. The republican leaders beamed their good will. Senator Owen of Oklahoma, precipitated some legislation in the closing hours. He asked for the passage of a bill authorizing Rodman Wamaker to construct at the entrance of New York harbor a memorial to the North American Indians. The bill passed the house, but the senate clerks, anticipating no action on it, carried it to the vaults. With less than 12 minutes remaining, the bill was passed and sent back to the house.

Just at three o'clock, or 3:02, correct time, while the vice president made his farewell remarks to the senate, the clerk of the house appeared at the door of the senate with the signed bill by Speaker Clark. This, however, did not stop the fall of the senate gavel and the measure will not be signed by the vice president, or president until next session.

In the closing hours of the house, Mr. Kinkaid, of New Jersey, made a speech advocating Philippine independence, and predicting that the democratic congress will soon carry out the promises of this government to the islanders.

Speaker Clark delivered a few remarks, extending felicitations to all the members and bespeaking health and happiness during the recess. Then officially at 3:00 P. M. but 3:02 in reality, the extra session was declared adjourned. The measures introduced during the session were 14, 628 bills, and 484 resolutions in the house; 5,296 bills and 58 resolutions in the senate. Only a few of these were passed. The senate adjourned without filling the office of president pro tempore.

CONVICT ELECTROCUTED
TRYING TO ESCAPE

Life Term Ends Sentence at San Quentin.

San Quentin, Aug. 22.—James Clifton, a life term was killed by an electric shock while trying to escape last night. His body was found by a guard lodged against the insulators on top of an electric power pole, outside the prison wall, his hands tightly clinging to the wires, down which he had slid from the top of the sash factory. The wires were charged with 4,500 volts.

Clifton was sent to the penitentiary in 1909 for the attempted murder of Detective Captain Hodgkins of Oakland, after an unsuccessful effort to break jail. He made elaborate plans for his escape. He had been in the commissary ward, and took a blanket from his bed and made trousers to conceal his prison garb. He manufactured an imitation revolver from an electrician's pliers to deceive the guards, and for a real weapon rolled a piece of iron pipe in a bit of blanket. With this outfit he entered the sash factory, climbed to the roof and grasped the wires. His body was constricted and his life was wrung out of him by the powerful current. When found the body was badly burned.

ATWOOD NEAR DESTINATION

Crowding the World's Record for Distance

MAY BREAK IT TODAY

An Easy Flight of Ninety-five Miles in Which He Had Nothing to Do But Sit in His Aeroplane and Read or Eat Lunch.

Fort Plain, N. Y., August 22.—Harry Atwood tonight is ninety-five miles nearer his destination as a result of his flight from Belle Island, near Syracuse to this place today. He ascended at 4:55 p. m., flew over Syracuse, then turned eastward and in the twilight sailed down the Mohawk valley, alighting in a field here at 7:05 p. m. His actual flying time was two hours and 19 minutes, made without stop.

"The air was calm as a pool," he said. "Most of the time I kept my hands in my pockets, or read time tables." He believes he will possibly be able to make New York tomorrow, but on Thursday sure. Atwood lacks just ninety-nine miles of beating the international record now held in Europe. This record he will surpass, if tomorrow he reaches Rhinecliff on the Hudson.

No accident marred today's trip, though most of it was made in the twilight or a haze. He flew over thirty-five cities and towns and maintained a schedule equal to a fast mail train. His start was delayed by high winds until 4:55 when the wind calmed.

"It was a lazy run today, anybody could do it," said Atwood. "If the experiments in aviation were confined to straight ahead sailing I'm sure the problem would be much easier and more surely solved. Sometimes I set my planes and sailed along and for ten minutes did not touch them. I read time tables or ate lunch."

Atwood is now 1,965 miles from St. Louis and 200 from New York. His total flying time, 23 hours and 36 minutes.

The decision in the Wiley case may also be forthcoming while he is at Beverly. With the departure of the president the bachelor colony at the White House will be broken up.

Son of Man for Whom Bisbee, Arizona, Was Named.

San Diego, Aug. 22.—F. W. Bisbee, is believed to have been drowned this evening, while attempting to swim the channel at False Bay. He entered the water at six o'clock at Ocean Beach, and was last seen crossing the channel into the sand spit on the other side. Then he disappeared. A search by boats failed to find him. His clothing was found on the shore. It is believed that he was carried to sea by the swift undertow.

There is also a suggestion of suicide in a letter, which was found in the clothing. It begun: "Leave my will and deposit to D—". The rest is not decipherable. Little is known of Bisbee here. He is said to be a son of the man for whom Bisbee, Arizona, was named.

MYSTERIOUS THEFT
OF A MASTERPIECE

LEONARDO DA VINCI'S "MONA LISA"

The Greatest Art Treasure of the World.

Paris, Aug. 22.—The art world was thrown into consternation today by the announcement that Leonardo da Vinci's masterpiece "Mona Lisa" had disappeared mysteriously from the Louvre. The famous painting hung in a place of honor in the salon Carre, and not a clue was left the detectives to aid in tracing it. The valuable frame and glass covering were found in a back staircase.

The "Mona Lisa" was one of France's greatest art treasures, ranking with the sculpture of Venus de Milo, the "Victory of Samothrace" and the "Inmaculate Conception." The picture appears to have been taken early yesterday morning, but its absence was not discovered until noon today.

At one time, it is said, the British government offered $500,000 for the painting which was refused. It is the most celebrated portrait of a woman in the world. The most striking characteristic is the smile. The model was the wife of Francesco del Ciondo, a Florentine of the fifteenth-sixteenth centuries. She then was 30 years old. The subject is sitting in a low chair, on the left arm of which she is leaning. The gown is simple. The dark hair hangs loosely. About the mouth is seen a sweet smile which had been the chief characteristic making the painting famous.

IN JOKING MOOD.
Pope Pius Is Now Entirely Convalescent.

Rome, August 22.—It may now be said that the pope is entirely convalescent. His physicians have ceased their visits to the Vatican, but have recommended that he take great care of his health and avoid fatigues. The pope is almost cheerful. Today he walked in the gardens a short time and seemed benefited. He met Father Doccia, the Vatican chemist, and joked him about his recent heavy labors in compounding medicines for him.

Wayward Girl Escaping From Detention Home.

San Bernardino, Aug. 22.—Anna Harris, aged fourteen, an inmate of the girl's detention home here made a desperate but unsuccessful attempt to escape today. When she was intercepted by policeman Toney she drew a revolver and pulled the trigger twice, both cartridges failing to explode.

Before she could pull the trigger the third time, she was seized and disarmed. She stole the weapon from the superintendent's office. She will be sent to the state school at Whittier.

GODFREY'S STILL HUNT

Visited the Germ Reserves of Northern Arizona

FOUND THE GAME PLENTIFUL

But Health Officer is Pleased to Note Its Lessening Quantity. New Rules Governing Open Season For Microbes.

Dr. E. S. Godfrey territorial health officer has returned from an official tour of the northern part of the territory. The purpose of his trip was to call on county superintendents of health and city health officers, and to make a general inspection of sanitary conditions, with particular reference to schools, dairies and slaughter houses. He visited Prescott, Winslow, Flagstaff, Holbrook and St. Johns.

The doctor says that with two exceptions he found the slaughter houses visited very insanitary and the two exceptions were by no means all that they should be but by the first of the year one of them at least will have been put in model condition by installing a plant for transforming offal into fertilizer. The other slaughter houses all make a practice of feeding the offal to hogs which in turn find their way to the markets, a practice condemned by the meat inspection bureau of the agricultural department.

The dairy management the doctor found fairly good in that most of the dairymen were evidently trying to conduct their business in a sanitary way, but many of them are handicapped by old buildings and poor equipment that makes an actually sanitary dairy impossible. It is expected there will be great improvements along that line though it may be expensive and burdensome to the small dairymen.

The school buildings the doctor found to be usually in a very good condition, fairly well ventilated and equipped. Some of them that he had visited before have been improved by the rearranging of seats and by the building of new toilets that had been condemned.

The most important incident of his trip was the adoption by the territorial board of health, at a meeting held in Prescott, of new rules governing quarantine, and the formulation of other restrictive measures in respect of infectious diseases. The new rules also further define the duties of county and city health officers and local registrars of vital statistics; provide regulations for the sanitation of dairies and schools and the sanitary construction of school buildings.

One rule prohibits the use of a public drinking cup and the roller or common towel in the schools. The doctor says it is ridiculous to undertake the teaching of sanitation and hygiene in the schools and permit these most common of all insanitary agencies to exist. As repulsive as a pupil may appear with dirty face and hands, it is better that he refrain from washing at school than to wipe his face on the same towel that a score of other children use, many of whom are suffering no doubt from one or another transmissible disease.

Under the new rules the county and city health officers are required to inspect the dairies and water supplies of their respective counties and make regular reports to the territorial board of health. The new rules which have the effect of law under the authority of the public health act, will be published and distributed as soon as possible, though they are quite voluminous containing a chapter on each of the subjects herewith referred to.

UNCONSCIOUS DEFAULTER
Secretary of National Jewish Hospital.

Denver, August 22.—According to advices received here, the directors of the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives, in session at Atlantic City, voted to make good any shortage in the accounts of Alfred Mueller, secretary of the institution, who died August 1st last. The indications are that Mueller is short about $25,000. Friends of Mueller here declare that if he was short he did not know it and that it is due entirely to his mental state the past few months as it is well known that he was not responsible during that period.
